DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION FOR HR PEOPLE

April 29, 2019 | Marriott Hotel - Karachi | 9:30am to 6:00 pm

Program Overview

In the midst of brisk advancement of business and further market expansions by organization, the employee factor has emerged as a salient feature concerning all organizations in terms of being the driving force in proceeding with the objectives of the organizations. In fulfilling the various essentials of the employees, the middleman who connects the organization and its employees serves a primary role that encompasses the needs, growth and well-being of the employees as well as aligning the organizations' mission and vision with the capacity offered by these employees.

The Human Resource has proven itself as the backbone of every organization as it manages and implements strategies and policies in relation to the management of employees. Digital transformation is the integration and acceptance of new technology in all areas of a business, enabling a more innovative and productive workforce. In this program participants will explore the role of HR in successful digital transformation.

Program Agenda

Session-1: What is HR digital transformation?

Digital Transformation is not about buying new gadgets or new software, or only about implementing digital operations and automation. It is about changing operational processes for the whole organization, including increased employee engagement, closing of knowledge gaps, and finding better ways of working. HR teams can lead this change by not only transforming HR operations, but also by actively guiding the change in workforce and how their work is done.

Session 2: The 'Why' of HR transformation

The aim of digital transformation is for HR to create and establish a working environment that not only increases productivity and efficiency, but also improves employee engagement and wellness. Digital transformation of HR can provide new and innovative ways to make HR tasks more efficient. Improvements in the processes of hiring, training and performance management will be mirrored by improvements in employee engagement, motivation and innovation.

Session 3: Digitalization and HR challenges

Adjustment to and adoption of the changes that digitalization of company processes require are not easy. HR teams must be prepared to not only face the lack of management buy-in, but also a backlash from employees who struggle to operationalize digital technologies. The challenge is not so much to bridge generation gaps between Gen X, Gen Y & millennials, but between digital natives and digital immigrants. Adjusting HR practices to a new world requires a lot of restructuring and groundwork.

Session 4: Which factors are necessary for a successful digital transformation?

Buy-in: Change has to be embraced by the whole organization, including the top. Every stakeholder has to be aware that there is no 'silver bullet' out there that you can buy of the shelf to make it work perfectly from the beginning. Each company is different, each employee is different. The organization has to be able to accept setbacks during the transformation learn from them and move on.

Investment: HR transformation is only a part of the overall digital transformation of a business. Business leaders and management will need to embrace the changes from the beginning. The strategy needs to be able to show from the beginning the benefits that digital transformation can bring to the business, like increased productivity, lower costs, better employees etc.

Three Case Studies of HR digital transformation

Unilever: how it uses social media, online games, and AI to further digitalize how they are recruiting.

Cisco: Develops the apps to help new hires and their managers during their onboarding period, or to give quick answers to various HR questions about holiday policy, expenses etc.

IBM: digital learning platform that gives its employees a fully customized experience.

What Next: The Age of Intelligent Tools: How AI is reshaping HR

HR is evolving to be a key driver in the productivity and profitability of organizations. The family of intelligent tools known as AI (machine learning, natural language processing, data modeling, systems thinking, process automation) are changing HR from an administrative function into a motivating force for progress and innovation.

- How emerging technology changes the work of HR
